Dedicated to Joan Y. Reede, MD, MPH, MS

To fly so high
That I can see
The stars of infinity

So close
It touches me.

To feel the fire
The ice, so cold
Of the history being told

So close
It touches me.

To visualize the danger
That inequity brings
Across the planes and dimensions

So close
It touches me.

To breathe the air
Rarified, above the sky
Beyond the pain of disdain

So close
It touches me.

To come home year after year
The friends, the sorrow, the joy
Of human tears

So close
It touches me.

So close
It touches me.

So close. So close. So very close.

It touches me.
